The following from the pen of James G. Percival, is one of the ment touching poems in the English language. It moreover tells the story of many a breaking heart; THE DESIGNATION WHITE.

and yet he comes not. I have watched the moon go down, and yet he comes not. Once it was not so. He thinks not how the bitter tear its flow, the while he holds his rise in the twen. Yet he will concentrate the one of a chall ramp. And he will wake my infrast from its sleep. To blend its forble walking with my coars.

Of how I love a mather's said in loss; Over the welcoping ever: that again which cheers My himst, thenth study in acrow thick and deep. I and a hash and one, who loved us— how An ever woars a fewer wood his trow, and bearing parties on a wanton's lip, as been from issued nowers a poison sip.

But yet I campet hate. O? there were hours ... When I could hang howeve on his eye. And firm, who said with shent witness by ... Siege od, so he harried on, his path with flowers.

I house him then—be loved me, too. My heart Still don't is fundament kindle if he smile. The memory of our loves will be or depart; And though her free, can twice upon the vite Vermon't and he free, can twice upon the vite Yearness which the new man mine stoud stars, in Carry see which the new and mine stoud stars, in Though he should spurm me, I will calmiy hear like madency and should sickness came and lay, its perapyring is and diplos blue, then I would with husbass all my wrongs repoy. Until the penitons show ill warp, and my How injured and how faithful I had been.

HUMAN NATURE -The St. Louis Herald relates the following Incident:

Yesterday afternoon, a little girl, not more than twe or three years of age, simply old enough to use its day logs in locamotion, but too young to know whither it went or how to return home, was found sitting on the steps of the Unitarian Church, crying bitterly. Another little feminine, who had apparently seen some three summers more than the little lost wanderer, passed, henitated a moment, and then, either through a sympathy innate and natural to her sex of whatever age, or from a conscious superiority in having seen more of this bad world than it had, carefully took it in her arms, wrapped her own course abawl around it, and taking its place on the steps, soon fulled it to sleep. Young as she wan, a mother could not have foudled her first born babe more care ully or anxiously thad she did the young stranger, the care of which she had intuitively taken: After holding a long vigil with her charge in her arms, at a loss what to dr with the little "el-phant" she had "drawn," yet determined not to abandon it, she was rudely accessed by a man's voice withwahat the devil are you doing with that young 'un. I have been hunting it for an hour ". Throwing it hastily upon his showlder, he hurried off without a single word of kindness or approbation to the little being who had turned from the wayside to protect his offepring. There is an immense amount of human nature in man-if it is sometimes bad.

Lawyers sometimes get as good as they send. A witness in a trial at Auburn recently exemplified this, though he appeared a very verdant specimen of humsnity After a severe cross examination the counsel for the government paused, and then, putting on a look of severity and an ominous shake of the head, exclaimed : .

"Mr. Witness, has not an effort been made to induce you to tell a different story ? " "A different story from what I have told, sir ?"

"That is what I mean." "Yes, sir; several persons have tried to get me to tell a different story from what I have told, but they "Now, sir, upon your oath, I wish to know who

those persons are."
"What, I guess you have tried bout as hard as The witness was dismissed, while judge, jury and spectators indulged in a hearty laugh.
